McCain would win general election in North Carolina

Raleigh, N.C. – Republican John McCain would win a general election match up against any of the three Democratic front runners for President in North Carolina, according to the newest survey by Public Policy Polling.

His leads in the state would be 48-42 over John Edwards, 49-42 over Hillary Clinton, and 52-38 over Barack Obama if the election was today.

Hillary Clinton and John Edwards appear to be the next strongest potential general election candidates in the state. Each of them lead three out of four possible Republican nominees.

The weakest nominee in North Carolina at this point would be Barack Obama. He trails three out of four of the main Republican contenders, while tying Rudy Giuliani.

In the race for US Senate, Elizabeth Dole leads potential Democratic nominees Kay Hagan and Jim Neal by 48-35 and 49-30 margins respectively. She has increased her lead over Hagan from 12 to 13 points since a similar poll in December and her lead over Neal from 15 to 19 points.

“The Democratic candidates for Senate have chosen not to go after Elizabeth Dole so far,” said Dean Debnam, President of Public Policy Polling. “They’re not going to get elected without showing voters why they shouldn’t reelect Dole, and as long as they fail to do that the incumbent will likely keep a strong lead.”

PPP surveyed 762 likely general election voters on January 21st. The survey has a margin of error of $\pm 3.6\%$. Other factors, such as refusal to be interviewed and weighting, may introduce additional error that is more difficult to quantify.

Complete results are attached and can be found at www.publicpolicypolling.com. Results include crosstabs breaking down the results by gender, party affiliation, race, age and region. For more discussion of the poll visit the Public Policy Polling blog at <http://publicpolicypolling.blogspot.com>.
