Perry takes huge lead in national GOP primary

Raleigh, N.C. – Before Rick Perry’s sudden emergence, there had been several presidential candidates this year who momentarily captured the imagination of the right wing—first Donald Trump in March, then Herman Cain in June, then Michele Bachmann in July. But not even Trump so quickly and decisively turned that into an actual lead in a PPP national poll of Republican primary voters.

Perry gets a full third of the GOP’s support, 13 points ahead of Mitt Romney’s 20% and Bachmann’s 16%. Everyone else has really settled into the background, with Newt Gingrich at 8%, Herman Cain and Ron Paul at 6%, Rick Santorum at 4%, and Jon Huntsman at 3%. Bachmann is down five points from a lead last month; Romney holds his ground, and Perry is up 21 points. If Sarah Palin jumps into the race, it would knock Bachmann to fourth at 10% behind Perry’s 27%, Romney’s 17%, and Palin’s 13%.

Yesterday’s Iowa release showed Perry leading there, and this poll suggests he is well-positioned for when the race goes national after the early states. In a contest among the currently supposed top tier, Perry would beat Romney and Bachmann, 41-29-19. If Perry were to somehow fall out of the race, about half of his support would go to each of the other two, and Romney would prevail over Bachmann, 49-40. But if Perry is in a two-way, he would beat Romney, 52-36, and Bachmann, 56-26. Romney’s more center-right supporters would much prefer Perry to Bachmann, but Perry would also be the second choice for most of Bachmann’s conservative voters, suggesting he could unite the center-right and far right voters that Romney and no other candidate has so far been able to.

“There have been a lot of flavors of the month in the Republican Presidential race and it’s possible that Rick Perry is just another of those,” said Dean Debnam, President of Public Policy Polling. “But his support right now is stronger than Michele Bachmann or Herman Cain or Donald Trump or Mike Huckabee’s ever was which suggests he should have more staying power.”

PPP surveyed 663 usual Republican primary voters nationwide from August 18th to 21st. The margin of error for the survey is +/-3.8%. This poll was not paid for or authorized by any campaign or political organization. PPP surveys are conducted through automated telephone interviews. PPP is a Democratic polling company, but polling expert Nate Silver of the New York Times found that its surveys in 2010 actually exhibited a slight bias toward Republican candidates.
